

My Column by Me

"Opportunism"

The years 1839 to 1943 witnessed the second German war. Within this time, however, there was no sadder catastrophe nor no greater loss of life occasioned than in the new historical eruption of Mount Royal.

Dispersed about the mountain was the smiling city of Montreal, with its population of one million people. Montreal was the greatest city of the Dominion of Canada—its financial capital, controlling all the moneys that flowed through Canadian hands, its greatest sea-port, handling a vast trade from the then flourishing continent of Europe, its touristic centre, with its broad and lovely streets, and its manifold and graceful parks.

It was upon such a city as this, happy enough in itself, and now happier still in the recent termination of the war, and the approaching of the great festival of Christmas, that the fires of hell swept down.

On the first day of December at 10 o'clock in the morning, everyone was busily engaged in his daily affairs. At that moment, there was a violent earthquake, and suddenly around the base of the mountain a wide fissure opened, and the holocaust began.

There was no flow of lava upon this occasion, but merely a spewing forth of burning cinders and sulphuric gases. For this reason the eruption has caused as much wonder to geologists as it must stir awe in the minds of the ordinary laymen.

Immediately the eruption began everyone made preparations for the exodus from the city.

Montreal was situated on an island whence bridges led to another island on the north and to the south shore of the river. These bridges were impassable, except upon payment of a nominal sum of currency, represented in those days by little discs of metal and slips of paper known as money. Those who collected the tolls, as it was called, at these bridges remained at their posts faithfully, and indeed perceiving a chance to gain a little more of this money than usual, raised the toll to three times the normal rate.

Similarly the men who operated the various means of public conveyance within the City, since they knew that over three quarters of the population, which possessed no other medium of travel, would have to seek refuge in their "buses, trams, and taxis," took advantage of the situation also to increase as much as twentyfold the ordinary fares. Unfortunately for the operators of the electrically-driven trams, however, the source of electrical power was cut off, since its controllers realized that they would have little chance of collecting for the current use.

Those people who possessed private cars loaded them generally with such possessions of value as they hoped to take away with them, and then, if there was any room left in their cars, they were canny enough to charge exorbitant rates of those demanding passage.

When it became apparent to the administration of the city that the fall of cinders was seriously obstructing the streets, the mayor ordered out the ploughs which in winter time were used to clear the thoroughfares of snow. These machines did their work effectively until the men driving them, not wishing to lose the advantage presented to them, forbore to clean the streets, and used their vehicles to

Objective Not Reached; Amalgamated Charities Campaign Closes Today

Canvassers Must Hand in Collections by 5 p.m. Today

Today is the last day of the McGill Amalgamated Charities Drive. The drive will officially close at 5.00 p.m., and those in charge request that all money be handed in to Mr. Fletcher in the McGill Union by that time.

Canvassers in the various faculties are especially requested to turn in their collections to-day, so that an estimate of the returns of the drive may be made. They are also asked to utilize this last day to the full in canvassing such names as they have on their lists yet uncovered.

Members of the student body who have not as yet been canvassed and who wish to contribute their dollar are reminded that contributions will be accepted by the following persons: Mr. Fletcher in the McGill Union, Bill Gentleman in the Arts Building, and the Faculty representatives of the drive, namely:

Arts and Science, Robert MacIntosh; Commerce, Jack Russell; Engineering, Robert Killam; Law, William Stuart; Medicine, John Charters; Royal Victoria College, Janet Hamilton.

Falls Short of Objective.

The drive this year has not been so successful as in the past, only 53.14 per cent. of the objective having been reached last night. It is hoped, however, that there is still much money in the hands of the canvassers, and that when complete returns are made the total will be somewhat advanced.

When the original quotas were assigned to the various faculties, some of the smaller schools were omitted. In spite of such an omission, the school for graduate nurses has contributed the sum of twenty-eight dollars to the fund.

Again this year it has been found necessary to extend the Charities Drive over two weeks. Last year, and this year too, it was anticipated that the work might be carried through in one week, with the co-operation of the students. This expectation was disappointed, and it was found necessary in both cases to extend the drive a week or more.

Nekola Addresses Litterateurs

Topic Will Be Literature of Czechoslovakia

The Literature Society has announced that Captain Nekola, of the Czechoslovakian Military Mission, will be the guest speaker at tomorrow's meeting of the Society. His subject will be Czech literature, past and present. Capt. Nekola is a graduate of the University of Prague, and is an authority on the literary history of his nation.

The meeting, which will take place at 8.15 p.m., is to be held at the home of Theo Mayer, 580 Cote St. Antoine Road. All students who are interested in any phase of literature or creative writing have been extended an invitation to attend. The executive has extended a special invitation to the Engineers who are interested.

After the program, refreshments will be served. Those who intend to attend the meeting have been asked by the executive to notify Nell Compton, Audrey Aikman or Mary Miller.

McGill Graduate Nurses Entertain Radio Locators

Last Friday evening, the McGill School for Graduate Nurses entertained forty men of the Radio Locator School. The informal dance took place at the School for Nurses on University St. Miss Lindeburgh, the Director, acted as hostess for the evening.

Although space was limited, a very enjoyable evening was spent in novelty dances, cards and sing-songs according to the announcement made yesterday. The sing-songs were entirely spontaneous by the Air Force. The Graduate Nurses said that they hope the Air Force enjoyed the evening as much as they did.

"Georgian" Staff Resumes Work Again Today

Sir George Williams College, still in the throes of a struggle between the "Georgian" newspaper staff and the Students' Council, will get its paper as usual tomorrow. The editorial staff, minus its chief, has returned unofficially as an "anonymous committee" to keep the "Georgian" in circulation.

On Thursday night the Students' Society requested the Executive to clarify its stand as regards the editorial policy. Last year a "Georgian" committee recommended that the students' paper's constitution be revised, but the Council has failed to ratify the changes. Cronin, editor of the "Georgian," had based his editorial policy on that new

Players' Club Announces Cast

First Rehearsal Will Take Place Next Friday

The Players' Club has announced that the cast for this year's production, "A Murder Has Been Arranged," has been chosen.

The role of Mrs. Arthur will be played by Judy Stoughton; Mrs. Wragg will be played by Mona Bronfman; Mr. Mullins will be portrayed by Raoul Bott; Lady Jasper will be characterized by Avril Keiller; Miss Groze will be played by Pearl Castelli; Jimmy North by John Averill; and Joan Coulter will play the part of A Woman.

The production is scheduled to go into rehearsal immediately, so that the members may become familiarized with the play before the holidays. The first rehearsal will take place this Friday at 4.30 p.m.

Last year, the Players' Club produced "Out of the Frying Pan," a comedy in which Pam Holt, Jackie Dorsey, Bunny Burke, Ronny Bayne, and John Averill held the important roles.

John Mellor, who was in charge of the production last year, will direct "A Murder Has Been Arranged." In previous years he has directed and produced: "Good Morning, Bill," "Richard of Bordeaux," and "Russet Mantle."

Avukah Society to Hold Supper Meeting, Social

The Avukah Society will hold a general supper-meeting at Regional Headquarters, 527 Sherbrooke St. W. at 5.30 p.m. this afternoon. Mr. Samuel Abramovitch will address the gathering and will present a paper on "Palestine and World Jewry." The main part of the meeting will be devoted to a discussion on how the Avukah can best co-operate with the War Council.

A social of "varied entertainment" has been announced by the executive, and will take place on December 12, 9.00 p.m. at 211 Maplewood Ave.

All friends and members of the Avukah, especially returned harvesters and the Air Force stationed on the campus are invited by the executive to attend both the supper meeting and the social.

Arts Society Holds Meeting

Plans for This Season to Be Discussed Today

It has been announced by Neil Compton, president of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, that the Society will hold its first general meeting today at 1.00 p.m. in Room 44 of the Arts Building.

At the meeting, it has been announced that the executives will present their plans for the coming season, and throw open the meeting for the suggestions and ideas of the members. The Society welcomes these suggestions, as they "form the basis of its organization," in the words of the executive.

Due to the harvest project and resignation of most of the executive elected last year, the Society was late in getting under way this year. However, the new executives have planned a full program which will include smokers, dances, brewery trips, a banquet, and other features.

At the meeting, candidates for the post of faculty representative to the Students' Council will have an opportunity.

War Effort Is Subject of Discussion

On Thursday at 8.15 p.m. the Student Labour Club will hold an open meeting in the Reading Room of the McGill Union.

The guest speaker will be Mr. Jean Charles Harvey, prominent journalist and editor of the French weekly "Le Jour." His subject will be "French Canada and the War." Mr. Harvey has been very active in promoting French and English Canadian unity behind a total war effort, and his talk will deal mainly with this aspect. He will also discuss the anti-conscriptionists, limited participants, and other forces at work throughout Canada.

Other speakers are expected to make brief statements on similar topics. Open discussion will follow. Varsity Backs Friendly Aliens

Seven Governors' Admission Ban Still Effective

Seven of the Governors of the University of Toronto are facing the indignation of the students as well as that of the Toronto press and public, as a result of two successive Board meetings at which it was decided to refuse the enrolment of friendly alien students in any of the Faculties.

The question first arose on the admission of two Japanese students, when the board met to decide on a general policy regarding the future enrolment of friendly alien students. The president of the University spoke in their favour and moved that they be admitted to the University, but the vote standing at 7-7 led to the defeat of the motion. In accordance with a by-law of the constitution.

All the student organizations and societies drew up petitions of protest, in the weeks following the announcement of the decision. This took place during the International Student Rally, when it was unanimously decided by the 400 students present that "the Board be asked to revise its decision." The Engineering Society was the only one to uphold the views of the Board of Governors, stating at its meeting that "There is no place in the crowded Faculties for Friendly Aliens during this present War", but went on to say that it did not object to admissions to the Arts (Continued on Page Four)

University of Montreal Holds Concert Series

As in former years, the University of Montreal Artistic Society will again present its series: "Les Concerts Populaires".

Each year, four concerts are sponsored by the University students, their aim being to promote the artistic and intellectual development of the students. In the past years, the concerts have been met with much favorable comment, and the same is expected of this year's presentations.

The first concert, comprising old French and English folk tunes will be put on by "Le Trio Lyrique." The concert is to be held in Plateau Auditorium at LaFontaine Park, and the price of admission is fifty cents per ticket.

Biographies to Be in Today

Editor Requests All Graduating Hand in Forms

Today is the deadline for handing in the McGill Annual Biography Forms to the appropriate Faculty Representative. These forms were issued to the Faculty Representatives over a month ago, and graduating students received the forms through them.

Originality is the prime requisite in the writing up of these forms, stated the Biography Editor. After accuracy, we consider originality as the most important consideration in making up a biography of a student, he added.

A sample biography of a student is given on the blank forms which were issued. This sample is not given so that it should be followed exactly, but is intended to be used only as a guide. The instructions further state that the biography is to be a short summary of the student's life, and should include date of birth, birthplace, preparatory schools, degrees held, activities at McGill and positions held and other similar data.

"We do not want any of the high-school pet aversion or favorite saying stuff," said the Biography Editor. Originality cannot be overstressed. Originality not only makes the biography pages more interesting but also makes a particular biography stand out above its neighbours.

ILO Will Meet In New York

Will Gather To Discuss Safety Plans

Canadian and American members of the International Labor Office's committee on accident prevention will meet in New York December 15 and 16, it was announced at the I.L.O.'s headquarters here today. It will be the first meeting of committee members since 1937.

The purpose of the meeting, according to the I.L.O. announcement, will be to discuss plans for the model safety code for factories which the I.L.O. is preparing, and also to consider a monograph on safety in dock work which the I.L.O. will publish.

Those attending the meeting will be Cyril Almsworth, assistant secretary of the American Standards Association; George C. Daniels, former chief inspector of factories of New York State; Lt.-Col. Arthur Gabor of Montreal, managing director of the Quebec Association for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents; Swen Kjaer, former chief of the accident statistics division of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor; R. B. Morley of Toronto, general manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations of Ontario; and Col. Henry A. Reninger, former director of accident prevention for the Lehigh Valley Cement Company, Allentown, Pa.

D. Vaage, Chief of the I.L.O.'s safety service, will attend the meeting as the representative of the I.L.O.

Table Reservations for Junior Prom Parties Will Be Accepted Today

Arrangements Can Be Made At Union Tuck Shop

Table reservations for the Junior Prom may be made today at the McGill Union Tuck Shop. These reservations will be accepted beginning today up to and including Thursday, December 10th. The parties formed may vary in size. Those arranging for parties should leave word at the Tuck Shop as to the number of people who make up the group.

Caution should be taken by those arranging for the parties to be sure that there is no duplication, since last year several cases occurred. If you put your name in as part of one party, do not, unless you remove your name from the original party, put down your name as part of a second party, stated the Committee in charge of part reservations for the Junior Prom. This only causes much confusion on the night of the dance, and also may make it harder for another party to obtain the proper accommodation. They urged that students make up their parties as soon as possible since they will be able to accommodate them more satisfactorily in that way.

Price To Be Raised
A favorable rise in the sale of tickets has been reported in response to the Junior Prom Committee's request for students to buy their tickets early, and if possible before Thursday, Dec. 10. In order to induce a faster sale of the tickets beginning on Thursday will be $5.00 per couple, tax included.

The explanation for this rise in the price of the tickets is that the Committee would like to know about forty-eight hours before the dance the approximate number of persons who will be attending. With such a definite indication as to the number of people who will be present, table and chair dealers and caterers will charge less without, including in their price the charge for the indefinite extras. This, therefore, will help keeping down the expenses of the dance.

Parades Postponed

Attention has been given to the possibilities of conflicts with military parades. The co-operation of the C.O.T.C. military authorities has avoided any such possibilities. Parades will be cancelled on Friday, the day of the dance, and also on the following day. The Radio Locators stationed at McGill wishing to attend the dance will be granted an all night leave.

Blake Sewell and his Orchestra will provide the music at the dance. The price of the ticket covers a supper which will be served at the dance in cabaret style. Dancing will start at 10.00 p.m. and will continue up to 3.00 a.m.

Tickets for the dance are now available at $4.00 per couple. They may be had in the Arts Building from Bill Gentleman, in the Engineering Building from Fred Barton, in the Medical Building from Mr. Marshall at the McGill Union Tuck Shop. Lois Nell, R.V.C. '44, is also selling tickets. The Airman may obtain their tickets from their Orderly Room.

Chess Tournament

The results of the first round of the chess club tournament should be handed in to the Union Tuckshop without delay, and in any case not later than noon tomorrow. (5)

The Junior Prom

All criticisms of Formal dances at the university in wartime are completely unjustified. These criticisms are based in large measure on the expense involved in the planning and execution of the dance, but these critics apparently neglect the fact that in spite of all the rantings about total war, in spite of the seriousness of the conflict, recreation is still an essential feature for a healthy and normal people.

And students are no exception. They must have a well balanced existence in order to work most efficiently, and it is certainly more desirable to have them spend an evening at a university and student function than at a downtown night club.

Moreover the officers commanding the C.O.T.C. and the U.A.T.C. have granted students permission to wear their uniforms; this decision will be appreciated by all students who are not as affluent as the rental of a dress suit warrants, and should further serve to eliminate the objection that students should not afford the extravagance of a formal dance in wartime.

The Prom committee has done an admirable job thus far in planning the decorations and eliminating superfluous expenses, at the same time conserving the true atmosphere of a formal dance. As a result the custom of last year will be followed with respect to corsages; the decorations will be appealing without being lavish, and most other things will be formal without being extravagant.

We heartily endorse the decision to limit the number of formal dances at college per year but we cannot condone any decision to eliminate them entirely.

Arts Apathy Again

Arts apathy is one of the most time-worn phrases on the campus. It started some time in the distant past as a catch-word, but has since developed into a tradition as deeply rooted and powerful at McGill as the "Forty Beers."

Unfortunately, this condition has now reached the point where the average artsman prefers to study post-war living conditions, rather than give a dollar to the Amalgamated Charities now. This has been illustrated appallingly clearly in the results of this year's campaign. We know that it is harder to collect from a large group than it is from a small group; the results have shown that. In every case the smaller faculties have come very near their objectives, while the larger faculties only reached the half-way mark.

However, this does not excuse the fact that Arts and Science could not reach the 25% mark, while Medicine, Engineering and R.V.C. all easily passed the 45% mark.

The War Council registration offers another flagrant example of arts apathy. The majority of artsmen, suffering under the burden of a course taking eighteen hours a week, could not find time to go down to the smoking room to register. Of those who were relaxing in the smoking room during the registration, some thirty per cent. found themselves unable to give up one hour per week for war work. We hope that these people will remember how busy they are when some more pleasant way of spending their time occurs, and that they will remember that they need all their time for studying the next time that they are in the smoking room.

You may call it propaganda, you may call it a cowardly attack on defenseless emotions, but whatever it is, "The Pied Piper" now playing at Loew's Theatre, leaves you breathless with its effect. Here is neither a powerful story—nor a vitriolic attack on the Hun—yet when you walk out of the theatre you think to yourself, "By George, what have those Englishmen got that makes them so impregnable to panic—and so determined to carry on no matter what the odds are against them."

The motion picture version of "The Pied Piper" is perhaps a little different in its effect from the book. When Nevill Shute wrote his best-seller, his intention was perhaps not so much to tell an adventure story, but rather to allegorize on the goodness and humanity that still may exist somewhere in the war-torn world amid all this strife. Here is the story of a crusty Englishman of the upper classes, who when caught in the maelstrom of the Nazi invasion in France decides to leave for London because, "... in time of a national emergency, an Englishman's place is at home." So he cuts his fishing expedition short, and commences his journey back to England. He is entrusted with the care of two children of English friends of his, to take back to London. On his journey through occupied France, he picks up more of the stray little vagabonds till this modern "Pied Piper" is the guardian nurse of five children. He is finally arrested as a spy, but is ironically enough released when the Nazi officer, finding out that he is sending the children to his daughter in America, persuades the Englishman to take along his little niece, because, "... it is not safe for her here, since she is only half-Aryan."

The movie transcription from the book was splendidly written by Nunnally Johnson. Some clever dialogue was added to lift the picture from becoming a morbid or maudlin production. Irving Pichel, who directed the film, achieved beautiful results by showing the effects of the New Order rather than by overplaying the Nazi-cruelty angle. The whole strength of the film lies in understatement rather than overstatement.

However, some of the scenes present an undesirable pathos. Especially overpowering was the sequence showing the machine-gunning of refugees by Stuka dive bombers on the choked roads of France. When one sees these things, and then the camera moves to show the crusty old Englishman who has taken the little waifs in his charge, you are left with a feeling that cannot be described. For it is one of both admiration and wonder.

If superlatives were not trite, Monty Woolley's characterization of the irritable Mr. Howard, could be easily described. The scenes with the German Gestapo officer, Major Diessen is notably effective. For here is a presentation of more than the conflict between two personalities. We can rather see the basic differences between the English and German mentalities. It is a mental struggle, reminiscent of O'Neill and Ibsen writings. The part of the German Gestapo officer is admirably handled by Otto Preminger. Roddy McDowall (of How Green Was My Valley) plays one of the youngsters, and credit is due to him for not overplaying as too many child actors are prone to do. The supporting cast, Anne Baxter as the French girl, J. Carrol Nash as the Frenchman who aids in the escape, and the many others are well chosen for their parts.

This is indeed a memorable production and should not be missed. —C. J. L.

HERE WE GO AGAIN

AT THE CAPITOL

As the title of the feature, "Here We Go Again," suggests, radio's two most popular programs are united for the second time, on the screen. Fibber McGee and Molly, with most of their entourage, and Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy with Mortimer Snerd, each in his own inimitable way, provide an evening of laughter, while a sketchy plot manages to make their paths cross, and provide a measure of coherence for the movie.

Fibber and Molly set out to celebrate their twentieth wedding anniversary at the scene of their honeymoon, where they encounter Gildersleeve, Mrs. Uppington and Wallace Wimple; while Edgar Bergen finds his way to the same spot on an entomological expedition. Otis Catwaller, Molly's old flame, is on the scene, and swindles Edgar Bergen into investing in a concoction of Wimple's, whose high explosive value might make it suitable for aviation gasoline.

Otis of course was not on the level, but the ductility of the silk from the cocoons that Bergen is out to discover, and everybody is satisfied.

Edgar Bergen, and his two dummies provide some very entertaining sequences, while all the circumstances that have endeared Fibber McGee and Molly to their fans, such as the hall closet, and the feuds with Gildersleeve, and Uppie, find a place in the program.

Bergen's love interest is supplied by Ginny Simms, who is better known for her singing. She has a small part and sings only one song. The musical background is provided by Ray Noble's orchestra, but their appearances were too infrequent. The scripts for the radio performers are excellent, but the weakness of the plot (which is subordinate anyway) and the lack of action, tend to make the picture drag.

The added attraction takes the form of an epic, with a formerly shiftless millionaire (Richard Carlson) taking a job with an independent carter, and helping the latter out of difficulties with racketeers, and winning the hand of the carter's sister (Jane Randolph). The action and surprises in this presentation help to keep the audience interested.

English Literature Society

The literature society at McGill has been in operation for a good number of years now, during which time it has enjoyed a varied career of success and failure. The meetings, for the most part, have been held either in the Grill Room of the Union, or in the R.V.C. Common Room. Last year the regular campus society held one meeting in the autumn, and then, because of the indifference of the executive, and the lack of adequate publicity, ceased to function.

Four Arts students decided that something should be done to remedy this state of affairs; and accordingly, formed a new society of their own, one which could not be classed as a regular campus organization, but which, in the opinion of those responsible for its inception, would awaken an interest in literature among students at McGill.

In order that those who were to attend these meetings might enjoy interesting and worthwhile evenings, it was felt that the procedure adopted by the society in former years would have to be abandoned to a large extent. For one thing the rooms in which the past meetings had been held were too large and inhospitable to make for entertaining discussion; and, accordingly, the basement room of a private house was procured as a rendezvous for the members. Informality was to be stressed, and, therefore, the executive was to exist in name only—each member possessing an equal say in the organization and procedure of the group.

Thus the group (it was preferred to call it a group rather than a society, as the latter term, in its very definition, implies too much formality) was born; and achieved a brilliant success throughout the winter months of the last college session. Interesting speakers were procured—members of the Arts faculty as well as others giving talks on literary and associated topics. Each meeting attempted to introduce something original; and on one occasion a particularly interesting and novel evening was enjoyed, when records of modern poets reading their work were heard by the group. Discussion invariably followed the speaker's address; and, before an open fire, with refreshments somewhat more substantial and vital than had been served in previous years, the spirit of informality and good fellowship prevailed. The attendance more than justified the hopes of those instrumental in the formation of the group, and in the spring there was a feeling of regret that the meetings must come to a close.

This year the regular society is functioning again. Several of the members of its executive were among those who attended last year's gatherings, and it has been decided to combine the two organizations. The group last year was not definitely associated with the university, and it was impossible to approach many of those who would have been interested. This year, however, the amalgamation plan has eliminated this difficulty; and, with the co-operation of the Daily, all those interested will know in advance the time and place of the meetings.

Several speakers have been lined up; and it is hoped that the students will justify the work of the executives, and maintain the standards achieved by last year's group, by turning out in as large numbers as possible.

Anniversary

DECEMBER 7th, 1942

It was just one year ago today, "a day that will live in infamy," that my country, the United States of America, was treacherously plunged into the war. Since then we as a nation have tightened our belts, rolled up our sleeves and have taken up the task with a vigour and determination that may well make the forces of aggression quiver upon their thrones of blood.

In these twelve months events have followed closely upon one another with lightning rapidity.

We have seen the little yellow sneak defy decency and stab us in the back at Pearl Harbor and have felt the bitter sting of defeat in the Philippines, Guam, Wake, Burma and other Pacific Islands.

While on the other hand the battles of Guadalcanal, Coral Sea, Midway and North Africa have shown that the so-called "decadent democracy," is not so decadent after all and that Johnnie Doughboy can still, "give 'em plenty of hell."

With glowing pride we have added to our Hall of Fame the names of McArthur, Colin Kelly, Stilwell, Doolittle, Devereux, Eisenhower, and Power.

At home we have come to regard rubber as being invaluable and have learned the true meaning of shortages, rationing, inflation.

Letter Forum

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,
Through the medium of your column I should like to congratulate Mr. Halford on his denunciation of the Prom. Such a letter as this crushes the shell of hypocrisy which has so often surrounded our war effort, and reveals to us the kernel of our true responsibilities.

I would go as far as say that Mr. Halford's patriotic fervour could make an even greater contribution to the war effort beyond the limited scope of the Campus. As he points out there is absolutely no justification for the Prom—"a spectacle of thousands of dollars being wasted." I am sure that the similar spectacle of thousands of Canadians wasting thousands of dollars in elaborate cabarets and night-clubs, on gluttonous banquets, expensive liquor and innumerable taxis, must arouse his ire as much as it does mine. Even the waste of the Prom cannot surpass this. In this respect too I feel certain we both agree that it is indeed deplorable to see so many young people wasting their increased earnings and their leisure hours in riotous living instead of contributing money thus spent to some worthy charity or towards the purchase of war stamps.

It is fortunate that the average University Student has neither the time to spare nor the money to spend on these forms of entertainments, and as the members of the University, as much as any other patriotic Canadian, have reduced their social life to the utmost level of the aforementioned "war-time simplicity," the annual Prom becomes an affair of "utter selfishness," extravagance and an exhibition of gross ignorance on the part of the students about the importance of war.

The appalling waste of four dollars per couple, the tires, the gasoline, and don't forget the carnation, is a disgraceful reflection upon the sincerity of the student war effort. The fact that it comes but once per year does not detract from the crime, but merely aggravates it inasmuch as a great number of students hoard their money like misers, depriving orphans, and old people of their support in order to attend this monstrous extravaganza.

As Mr. Halford observes, England has abolished formal, and therefore inevitably believes, and rightly too, that we should not indulge in this "unnecessary ostentation." In this respect I feel that I should point out that there may be a great deal of controversy and prejudice aroused in the public mind over this difficult point. Whether we dress in our normal everyday clothes or exchange them for another type on this one occasion is an issue which cannot be taken lightly in these days of great problems. Let us hope that the long-suffering public will be once more generously indulgent with us.

the complacency, ignorance and extravagance of such affairs as the Prom is representative of, can be no more forcibly demonstrated than it was at Hong Kong and Pearl Harbor. When we recall the fate of these two places, and realize that our Prom may be partially responsible for the occurrence of a like situation in our midst, I am sure that even the most apathetic student will be aroused from his academic slumber.

In closing let me draw your attention to a passage in Childe Harold where Byron describes the beauty of the great Ball held before the Battle of Waterloo. Here he speaks of the "revelry by night" while enemy cannon thundered ominously in the background. What influence the Ball had upon the outcome of the Battle I cannot say, but a great victory was won. Let us pray that despite the evil folly of the Junior Prom ultimate victory will still be ours.

Sincerely yours,
Allan Thomson.

Dear Sir,
On Saturday morning scores of first year Engineers went to the Drafting Room to get up to date in our drawing, only to find a bunch of Accountants writing exams there. This would not have been so annoying had we not gone to McGill that day solely to do our drawing, as we have no lectures on Saturday morning. It would be very much appreciated if the authorities would let us know beforehand of such arrangements, and (Continued on Page Four)

MCGILL SINKS NAVY 7-6 IN N.D.H.L. GAME

League Standings Tied As Redmen, Army Trim Seamen, RCAF Friday

McGill Leads 5-0 in Second Period; Farmer Leads Scoring with Three Goals

By A. D. BLOOMBERG

The Redmen regained their winning stride on Friday night, and their spirited play was enough to overcome the Navy's advantage in speed, and avenge the defeat they suffered in their last meeting with Farquharson's men. Bud Farmer was shifted to the defence and, playing one of his finest games in a McGill uniform, sparked all seven McGill scoring plays. After seeing a 5-0 lead disappear near the halfway mark of the final period, Farmer, Blair and Macdonald surged through the Navy defence, with less than five minutes to go, and the right winger drove the puck through goalie Muir's legs to put the Redmen ahead 7-6. This was the deciding goal, as the collegians held on desperately to their margin, keeping the sailors well out of scoring range for the remainder of the game.

COSTIGAN SCORES

Right from the face-off, the Redmen turned on the heat, and, playing the same type of close-checking game, that brought them their first victory, had the Navy bottled up in their own defensive area for two or three minutes. When Vin Young was banished for hooking, the sailors sent on five forwards, but the McGill defence held fast, with Ritchie making several fine stops. Bud Farmer and Bill Macdonald broke away with one Navy defender to beat, and although they were stopped, Johnny Costigan followed up the play, and after a short scramble, dented the twine to give the Redman the lead, which they maintained for the rest of the game except for the two minutes when the count was knotted.

At the start of the second period the Redmen were still pressing, and Pee-wee Read broke away from the pack, with nobody to beat but Ritchie, and the latter made the finest save of the game. The lead began to build up when Bruce Crutchfield snatched Farmer's forward pass through the blue defence, and fooled the goalie from close in. After Paulson was given a penalty, McGill put on a series of power plays, and the defence moved up inside the Navy blue-line. It was from this position that Bud Farmer sank two goals on long shots, although the official scorer gave the last one to Hale. The plays were identical—Hale and Lockwood in succession, rounded the Navy nets, drew out the goalie and centred out to Farmer at the blue-line, from where he shot into an open net.

MCGILL LEAD 5-0

When Dick Lockwood and Gordie Benjamin were sent off for ten minutes for a fight that threatened to resume in the penalty box, the Navy held the advantage in play. However Bud Farmer made as clean a breakaway as was ever seen, leaving the whole blue team frozen in their tracks, behind the McGill blue line, where they stood and

ASSAULT-AT-ARMS

There is still plenty of room on the card for Boxers who wish to take part in the coming Inter-company Assault-At-Arms of Dec. 16th and 17th. Since this is a meet for beginners any student who has ever had even the slightest of experience at this sport should make it a point to enter.

The Campus Spotlight

by ast

The American football experts, and all those others who like to call themselves experts on any subject under the sun, took quite a beating as the result of the football clashes last week. Well up here in Canada, in fact right here at McGill, the "boys in the know" were thrown back for two considerable losses this past week-end. In one of these cases the followers of the sports' parade were pleasantly surprised, while in the other the reverse was true. By now you must have guessed that we refer to the victory over the Navy by the hockey squad, and the rather disappointing outcome of the basketball game against Sir George Williams' College.

The victory at the Forum was, indeed, sweet revenge for the defeat suffered at the hands of the Tars in the closing minutes of the game two weeks ago, and no doubt, all hockey followers were cheered to see the Redmen regain their winning stride. But as is customary among most sport lovers, the tendency is to discover what causes a disappointing defeat rather than to bother about dissecting a recent victory. Being no exception to this international fraternity, we now plunge into the whys and wherefores of Friday night's basketball encounter.

To begin with, the Red team was minus the services of Nello Delbel, last year's captain and the most dependable guard on the team, and Lee Vernon, a high scoring and aggressive forward. But these are just excuses, the real reason being that the Maroon and Gold team just plain outthought our representatives. The McGill team showed infinitely more polish and form, but when it came to fight and spirit, Dan Munroe and Gerry Leonard were the only men on the squad who showed any real pep. The Georgians used a zone defence, and succeeded in intercepting most of the McGill passes and broke quickly down the floor, to score most of their points on these sorties. On the other hand, the Red team's points were mostly as a result of shots from far out on the floor—the Redmen being unable to penetrate the outposts of the enemy.

To add to the fine efforts of the Georgians, it must be said that several of McGill's leading lights were certainly not at their best. Ronnie Wilson could not find the range until mid-way in the second half, while Bob Mumford was unable to score at all. To counter this, the Sir George snipers, particularly Rip Jonas, were in rare form. The second team, however, showed to better advantage in overcoming the toughest opposition they have faced to date from a squad representing the Wireless School. But the dogged determination and snappy team play of this younger aggregation, which was in sharp contrast to their senior partners, finally overcame an aggressive Air Force squad. Jack Eastwood sparked the early attack of the Red team, when he scored the seven points before three minutes of play had been completed.

Notes and jottings. . . A quick glance at the standings of the N.D.H.L. will show that the Redmen have been scored on less than any other team so far this season. . . this makes Ritchie the leading netminder. . . as if he is not in any case, figures or no figures. . . F.O. Bert Light, sometime boxing coach at McGill, will be holding a display at the Wireless School on Friday. . . John Dixon, one of McGill's current crop of pugilists will appear in one of the bouts. . . The M.B.L. schedule shows us that the Red Cage team next appears against the Pats on Dec. 18. . . Buster Allen, for many years a top ranking star in local basketball circles, has been added to the roster of the Longue Pointe outfit in the Inter-Services League. . . should help to raise them above the cellar. . . Old man Conklin seems to be getting better as he goes along. . . he paced the Oilers in their recent defeat of the Air Force squad by ringing up 8 points. . . So long for now.

Freshettes Top Sophs in Co-Ed Basketball Fixture

The freshettes met the Sophs for the first time in basketball over the week-end, when section A2 beat section B2. Although they suffered from lack of practice, the upper year girls put up a stout resistance to the freshettes' smashing assault; especially since their team was one girl short. The game ended with the count 25-13 in favour of the freshettes.

In another exciting co-ed hoop encounter on the week-end, section B4 met section C in the R.V.C. Gymnasium. In this encounter the section C squad emerged victorious by the close margin of 14-12. If these games are any indication, it looks like the girls are in for a highly successful season.

Georgians Trim Redmen in MBL Fixture; Service Team Defeats Wireless School by 39-34 Score

Sir George Wins League Opener By 32-22 Score

On Friday evening, at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium, the McGill entry in the Montreal Senior Basketball League met with defeat at the hands of a Sir George Williams' College quintette. The Georgians making their first start in the big time after winning the intermediate crown for two straight seasons, held a definite edge over the Redmen as they overcame them by a 32 to 22 score.

The McGill team, minus two of its stalwarts, Lee Vernon and Nello Delbel, could not cope with the determined drive of the Maroon and Gold, while the Red attack was shattered against the stonewall zone defence which the visitors put up.

WELTON, JONAS STAR.

Only twice, and that being early in the game, did the Redmen hold the lead, but the Georgians, led by Lloyd Welton at centre, and the high-scoring rip Jonas on the forward line, quickly regained their supremacy and maintained it throughout the struggle.

For the big Red team, dependable Bert Holdredge scored two field goals in the first half of the game, while Dan Munroe, easily the most aggressive of the McGill forwards, added three more points to the total. Bernie Robinson picked up a rebound from one of Ronnie Wilson's stray shots to complete the scoring for McGill in this first session. The half time score was 15 to 9 in favour of the Maroon and Gold.

WILSON SINKS TWO

With the opening of the second period of play, the Sir George Williams' squad began to bolster their total and forged into a ten point lead, but a series of furious McGill counter attacks brought the Redmen within close range, when field goals by Robinson, Holdredge, Beland, and two by Ron Wilson followed each other in quick succession to bring the score to 23 to 20, with the Redmen holding the short end of the count.

From then on, however, the Georgians nearly had a scoring monopoly—Munroe coming through with the lone Red two-pointer. With Welton and Jones again spearheading the attack, the Maroon and Gold amassed nine more points before the final bell.

In this, their first appearance and defeat of the current season, the season cagers displayed a smooth brand of basketball, but lacked the speed and all-around aggressiveness which characterized the play of the victors.

For the visitors, Welton was easily the best man on the floor, although Rip Jonas secured the scoring honours. The tall centreman was the mainstay of their defensive play, while his play-making set the stage for most of the scoring thrusts of his team mates.

In the opening game of this double bill, the St. Hubert's Service Flying Training School fell victims to the Oilers, last year's Eastern Canadian Champions, 22 to 18. The line-ups:

meatless days, dim-outs, and sacrifice.
With saddened hearts we have watched our young men, the pride of our future leave their comfortable homes and marched off to endure the hardships of battle. Boys from Texas, New York, California, Wisconsin sent to the new strange surroundings of Australia, India, Africa, England.
Capital and labour have joined hands to achieve production figures that would have been thought of as impossible. Industry is working twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week to produce in infinite quantities the implements of war, implements that have proven their worth upon a score of fronts.

The American way of life has displayed that honour, truth and justice are not just devices for political convenience and that efficiency and effectiveness can be obtained without descending to brutish gestapo methods. The trail of Max Stephan and the apprehending of the German spies by the F.B.I. have demonstrated this.

Eighteen year old youngsters whose main problems centred about football games and dances are now being welded into instruments of retribution.
American blood has mingled with the sands of foreign shores. Such is 1941-42, we have made many mistakes, undoubtedly we shall make many more. A Letter of Thanks
(Ed. Note: This letter was received by S. Willis from Dr. F. Pavlasek thanking students for their help on International Students' Day.)
November 25, 1942.
Mr. Stewart Willis, President, Students' Council, McGill University, Montreal, Que.
Dear Mr. Willis,
Kindly accept my thanks for your assistance in organizing the student manifestation in commemoration of the martyrdom of Fragué Students.
The students of McGill University contributed in a very remarkable way in expressing the solidarity of all students in the struggle against oppression and for the freedom of education. I appreciate the manifestation of McGill University especially because it was arranged under very difficult conditions, which this year caused so many changes in their study programme. Kindly convey to all your colleagues, and to all student organizations which contributed to its success, my sincere gratitude.
Yours very truly,

carry passengers at opportunist prices.
The whole traffic of the city was concentrated toward the two bridges over the river, since these formed the shortest means of exit from the island. The bridges themselves were sufficiently narrow to occasion a considerable bottleneck, and the insistence of the toll collectors upon increasingly higher sums of money caused still greater delay. The filling of the streets with ashes impeded the traffic so that it could not move and the cutting off of electrical supply rendered tramways useless and prevented the street lamps from dispersing the darkness resulting from the cloud of flying cinders which lay over the city.
Even before the gases crept through the streets to asphyxiate practically the total population of the metropolis, many lives were lost among the poorer section of the city. For these people, having no money wherewith to pay the prices demanded of them, were yet as desperate in their attempt to escape with their lives as others who had every means at their disposal. Frequently they would climb onto some moving vehicle in their search for refuge, whence, if they did not fall from the very motion into the path of the traffic coming on behind, they were pushed by the owner who could not exact from them the money he demanded. In this way, every car that moved about the streets of the city became a juggernaut to unwilling worshippers of the great god pelf.

Thus, and by the suffocating effects of the gases, nine hundred thousand of the population perished. The eruption continued four days and completely blotted the city of Montreal from human ken.

constitution, and declined to accept blame for the failure of the Council to make a clear stand earlier in the year.
Cronin added that his dismissal was not the result of a long series of clashes, but came as an aftermath to an editorial supporting "Life's" article on French Canada some weeks ago.
Four attempts at adjournment during Thursday's stormy meeting failed, and finally the resolution asking for a clarification of policy was passed.

and with McGill on the defensive, scored two goals before the close of the second period, and two more in the third period, before the teams returned to full strength. Bud Farmer broke up a Navy gang attack singlehanded, and got another breakaway, to score McGill's sixth goal. This was not enough, however, as the sailors still held the initiative, and rammed home two counters in two minutes to tie the score.

BLAIR SINKS FUCK
After Bob Blair sent the collegian ahead to stay, they began to take the offensive, and by effectively breaking up the Navy plays before they got started, were able to keep the wolf from the door.
Bud Farmer was the best man on the ice. Ritchie turned in his usual clever display, while the whole team, particularly Bob Blair, checked like fiends. During the closing minutes Bruce Ward and Vin Yonug were unbeatable on the defence.
For the Navy, Peevee Read was a standout. He played more than half the game and led most of the rushes. The whole team skated like the wind, and only Farmer and Blair seemed to be able to match them.

thought out and forceful that his editorial gets reprinted here, there, and everywhere. Result: Mr. Penny's average audience, instead of being limited to thousands, can be numbered in hundreds of thousands.
He is now celebrating his twenty-fifth year as editor first of the Quebec Chronicle and latterly of the Chronicle-Telegraph. During those twenty-five years he has built up for himself a position similar to that of William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, whose words count for more on the New York Times. Unlike White, however, Penny, the man, has been little publicized; he has been content with the bushel of editorial anonymity as long as the light of his opinions shone clear. That they have shone clear is proved by the freedom with which they are quoted.

GUM CHEWERS—ATTENTION
A striking blow has been dealt. There is to be LESS GUM CHEWING. Janitors, cleaners, school teachers, and college professors are jubilant. Wholesalers report the repeat our slogan obtained from the wrapper and used with the kind permission of the manufacturer: Gum aids digestion, sweetens the breath, chew it after every meal! Yes, chew it after every meal and your reward will be more than our slogan intimates. We who have chewed deeply and vigorously into the secret know this. What does a non-chewer do in the lonely hours after midnight, when by a glaring lamp, he is forced to digest page after page of unpalatable material without the friendly comfort of chew-swish-chew which helps the true gum-chewer on his weary path of educational achievement?

Oh, gum-chewers, we are so fortunate! We should pity those who scoff at us—those whose frayed nerves, pencil-chewing habits, excessive smoking, etc., are proofs that they have not yet entered into the blissful fold of gum-chewers.
NON-CHEWERS, a word! Would you like to join our ranks? Can you contact a dozen stiff wads of gum beneath a chair without cringing? Can you chew softly throughout a long sermon without disturbing your neighbor? Can you resist the desire to pull or crack your gum when in the presence of so-called 'polite' society? If so you are well on the way of becoming members of the true gum-chewers' group who boast, and rightly so, of their sweet-flavored Spearmint, Doublemint, or Juicy Fruit breaths, of their rate of chewing per minute of firmly contoured facial muscles and of perfectly controlled sound effects.

SUBCONSCIOUSNESS...
Weird things that pass in the night, Worms crawling, White mice covered with blood, Multi-colored, icy snakes weaving, Planets hurtling to earth in a blaze of color, These things—in the night.
Strange noises heard 'a the night, Blood-freezing screams, Heart-rending moans, The howl of the wolf preying, The hoot of an owl, the shriek of a loon, These things—in the night.
Ghostly people seen in the night, Wheeling drunkards, Staggering homeowners: Lovers in hot embrace, Passionate sighs, sticky kisses... Ghostly—in the night.
But beauty lurks in the night, Glistening stars, Black tree silhouettes, Orange moons on rippling, inky waters, A flickering lamp on a vast, cold prairie; Warmth—in the night.
